Birds In The Garden 2018

The Big Garden Birdwatch 2018 was the 'world's largest garden wildlife survey', according to the RSPB, who ran the survey. The wildlife survey asked people to record what types of wildlife they saw in their garden, over the course of one hour. The wildlife people recorded in their garden mainly focused on the different bird species they saw in their garden for that hour.

20 birds to spot in your garden - and how to attract them

We have had an unremarkable roll call of bird species, though, but - interestingly - this is now changing. Although I was working hard in the office this morning (!), a pair of drab looking small birds caught my attention. Sitting on some garden furniture, they were sallying up to roof level to catch insects, then dropping back to their perches.
